

Master of ICT at AeU

ASIAn University (AeU) is a premier Open & Distance Learning (ODL) institution in Asia and has set up a university in Malaysia. It is founded on innovation and technology and has its focus on the digital frontier. Among its many programmes is the Master of Information and Communication Technology Management (MICTM). The degree programme is structured to equip students with interdisciplinary skills. It offers a reliable link between the dynamics of technology and management in business. It is recommended for IT professionals who will improve their leadership skills and techniques and develop a more strategic approach to deal with today's tech-savvy organisations.

AeU recently celebrated its 8th convocation at the Putra World Trade Centre. Of the 2,669 graduates, 815 students took postgraduate programmes of which seven locals and four foreigners were MICTM graduates.

Warren Suti (pix) from Papua New Guinea was among the graduates. A principal project engineer with a government agency in Papua New Guinea; the 44-year-old is a father of three said he wanted to develop his skills.

"My job entails initiation, evaluation of tenders and management of all ICT projects including promotion on project awareness to different stakeholders. I often felt I lacked management skills and needed to develop myself in this area. Hence, AeU is my preferred choice after searches and recommendations from friends."

Warren is one of many who enrolled in the MICTM programme fully conducted online. He said the fees were affordable and the flexible online mode of study suited his lifestyle; not having to give up his job. He could also study from home or wherever he was and easily download materials to prepare for exams. Moreover, AeU's MICTM is internationally benchmarked, approved by the Malaysia Ministry of Education and accredited by the Malaysian Qualification Agency

He found subjects interesting and relevant to his work, and was soon developing more skills and in-depth expertise. "The knowledge I gained continues to be useful and applicable in my current working environment and my experiences, richly rewarding.
